the Skagit Valley (First Nations Languages):

Oral stories form a portal through which rich cultural and linguistic information is passed from generation to generation. Tellings from Our Elders Volume 2 presents stories in the Skagit Valley dialects of Lushootseed, the language of the indigenous people of the southern and eastern shores of Puget Sound. Transcribed from recordings made of the last generation of elders who learned Lushootseed as an exclusive mother tongue and published with line by line interlinear translation. As excellent examples of a specifically linguistic form of textual presentation, these volumes definitely achieve what they have set out to do. As such, they are not books that one would pick up simply to read the stories. Nevertheless, it is possible to discern the linguistic features of the language through the interlinear translation.
